Some truth about Oleg Churyumov

Cross-posted from Tech Lounge.

Why was it posted here?

Some people who support this guy don't work in Amazon or in the tech industry. Therefore, this post was cross-posted in Topics that are publicly available.

While the guy holds his hungry protest, I will reveal some information about his past. Below is a free translation from Russian of an article published on politrussia.com. Perhaps, this will also be interesting to USCIS officials.

Disclaimer: I am by no means associated with this guy, except for the country of origin and that I also work at Amazon. Also, I am not a manager, HR, or lawyer.

In the spring of 2014, Oleg Churyumov, together with his friends, opened a capsule hotel - Tigrodom, which enjoyed great success with young entrepreneurs. The building was rented from the representative office of the governor of one of the regions of Russia in Moscow. Everything was going well, but at the end of 2014 the rent was doubled, and in the spring of next year all the house guests were literally put out of the door with the help of a private security company.

One could talk about a raider seizure, if the officials, having appropriated all the equipment (capsules), would eventually do the same thing - rent the house to young entrepreneurs. This did not happen, so we can only talk about a gross violation of the lease agreement, which must be studied in detail, but... it did not exist.

Oleg Churyumov says: "We, aspiring entrepreneurs, made a huge mistake, trusted the corrupt bureaucratic scheme, according to which we received the state property for rent without proper legal registration. As a result, all payments went into the pocket of the above-mentioned officials, and not into the state budget."

"We found a very advantageous offer on a real estate website: a townhouse with an area of more than 700 square meters for 250 thousand rubles ($7000) a month. The location also suited us." Then they met with the head of the department of organizational, protocol and analytical work of the representative office of the governor in the state authorities of the Russian Federation.

"We have agreed verbally on a long-term lease for a period of at least three years. At the same time, he proposed not to enter into a formal lease agreement, but instead to sign an agreement, as if we were engaged in maintenance of the premises, in the amount of 5 thousand rubles ($140) a month. We agreed to transfer all the money in cash from hand to hand," - the businessman said. Now Churyumov understands how risky it was to "take a word." "But then we were attracted by the low price," he explains.

Here is the point of this whole story - the cost of the building was much lower than the market. The businessman from the very beginning knew about corruption and actively participated in it.

The journalists requested the law enforcement agencies to check whether the actions of the businessman Oleg Churyumov constituted the crime covered under Article 291 of the Criminal Code of the Russian Federation "Giving bribe".
